The President and Ex-President of France.

M. Marie Francois Sadi Carnot, who on Saturday was elected President of France, is a son of M. Lazare Hippolyte Carnot, a well-known politician and author in his day, and grandson of the celebrated War Minister of the first French revolution. He was born in Lamoges on August 11, 1837. M.
Sadi Carnot was educated for the life of an engineer. In 1857 he entered the Polytechnic School, and later was transferred to the School of Roads and Bridges, where he graduated in 1863. After serving as Assistant Secretary of the Government Council on Roads and Bridges he was placed on engineering duty in Upper Savoy. This post he held when he was summoned to a political career by the downfall of the Second Empire. In January, 1871, he was appointed Prefect of the Department of Seine-Inferieure, and was charged with the organization of the national defense in the three departments of the Seine-Inferieure, the Eure and Calvados. In February, 1871, he was elected to the National Assembly from the Department of the Cote-d'Or, and took his seat in that body with the republican left, of which party he was made the secretary. He supported earnestly all the laws for the definitive establishment of the republic. On the division of the Assembly into two branches, in the early part of 1876, he was elected to the Chamber of Deputies from Beaune, and was made one of the secretaries of the Chamber. In the Chamber M. Sadi-Carnot became known as an authority on public works. He was frequently called upon to serve on the Budget Committee, of which he was Chairman in 1883. In December, 1878, he was appointed Under-Secretary for the Department of Public Works. When M.
Ferry first became Premier, in September 1880, M. Sadi Carnot was promoted to the position of Minister of Public Works, but retired from the Cabinet when Gambetta became Premier, in November, 1881. He was re-elected to the same position by M. Brisson in April, 1885, and when Brisson was succeeded in the Premiership by M. De Freycinet in January, 1886, he was made Minister of Finance. He retained that position until De Freycinet's retirement, in December of last year. The partial reconstruction of the Ministry at that time was chiefly caused by his refusal to consent to the large reductions demanded by the Budget Committee.

M. Sadi Carnot's wife is a clever woman, charming, lively, well informed, anxious to please and successful in making herself agreeable in society. She is active in pushing her husband and in keeping his name before the public, and never misses attending an official reception. There is no more insatiable reader of English works of fiction in this or any other country. She speaks English with fluency. Her father was Dupont White, the translator of Stuart Mill's works into French. Madame Sadi-Carnot is the mother of four girls.

In being forced to resign before the end of his proper term President Grevy only suffers the late that has befallen all of his predecessors in the presidency since the establishment of the third republic. Thiers resigned on May 24th, 1873, in consequence of a combination in the Assembly to defeat his proposition to make the republic permanent by legislative enactment, and MacMahon, who succeeded Thiers, was forced out in January 1879, before the conclusion of his term of seven years, by a hostile movement of which Gambetta was a leading spirit. In the expulsion of MacMahon M. Grevy is thought to have taken an active part, and it is well known that he took part in the revolution of July, 1830. This being the case he cannot well complain of extra constitutional proceedings. The weapon of revolution is two-edged, and those who use it must take the chances of its recoil upon themselves. The effect of the resignation of President Grevy is of course to diminish the importance in the state of the office held by him, and to make its incumbent dependent upon the Chamber of Deputies. Such a situation was, however, advocated by M.
Grevy himself in 1848, when he proposed that the Chief Executive should hold office at the pleasure of the National Assembly, with the title of president of the council of ministers.

M. Grevy's public career has been an extended one. Born at Mont-Sous-Vaudry, Jura, August 15, 1813, he became an advocate at Paris, where he acquired influence as the opponent of socialism and Bonapart-ism. His talent was recognized in his defense of radicals under prosecution by the government, and from 1848 to 1851 he was in public life as a member of the constituent and legislative assemblies. After the coup d'etat of Louis Napoleon he withdrew from politics and practiced law. In 1868 and 1869 he was elected to the Corps Legislatif and in 1871 to the National Assembly. Of the latter body he was president from February, 1871, to April, 1873, and again in 1876. He was also twice president of the new Chamber of Deputies. On January 30, 1879, he was elected President of the French republic, after Marshal McMahon's resignation, for a term of seven years, and at its conclusion was re-elected for a like term. The bitter hostility of the radicals which resulted in his expulsion from office, may be traced, perhaps, to the firm stand he took against the inclusion of General Boulanger in the ministry to be formed to succeed that of M. Goblet. It was a wise act, and inspired most probably by patriotic motives, but it excited against M. Grevy the ire of M. Clemenceau and the whole horde of political fanatics at Paris.

Caffarel scandal, with its sequel in the development of details affecting the reputation of M. Wilson, was seized with avidity by the radicals, socialists, communists and other impracticables as an implement of vengeance upon the President, and the monarchists, always ready to discredit the republic, have played into their hands.

CLOTHING.

ONE OF THE TESTS.

Gentleness is a small part of a boy's nature. He goes at everything with a dash and a rush, and if his clothing is not of good MAT-RIAL and WELL MADE, "nip goes the seams and off goes the buttons."

Now if you have a boy to clothe do not buy him a suit or an overcoat till you have examined our stock.
Our Clothing is strong in every particular, and will stand much rough usage.

We can also take care of the "grown-up boys" whether it be a suit, FURNISHING GOODS, or OVER-COATS; and as to Overcoats, you will need one either on your back or on your arm from now on.
